

Amendments to the Claims

Claims 1-34 (canceled).

Claim 35 (previously amended): A method for the treatment of osteoporosis in a human subject, comprising administering to said subject human parathyroid hormone (1-34), without concurrent administration of an antiresorptive agent other than vitamin D or calcium, in a daily dose of 20 μ g said treatment for reducing the risk of vertebral and non-vertebral bone fracture.

Claims 36-64 (canceled)

Claim 65 (previously amended): The method according to claim 35 wherein said human subject is a man or post-menopausal woman.

Claim 66 (previously amended): The method according to claim 35 wherein said osteoporosis is steroid-induced.

Claim 67 (new): A method for the treatment of osteoporosis in a human subject, comprising administering to said subject human PTH (1-34), in a daily dose of 20 ug, supplemental vitamin D, and calcium, without concurrent administration of other antiresorptive agents, said treatment for reducing the risk of vertebral and non-vertebral bone fracture.

Claim 68 (new): A method for the treatment of osteoporosis in a human subject, comprising administering to said subject human PTH (1-34), in a daily dose of 20 ug, and supplemental vitamin D, without concurrent administration of another antiresorptive agent, said treatment for reducing the risk of vertebral and non-vertebral bone fracture.